No Records, But Cattle Markets Offer Promise

By Linda Breazeale
MSU Extension Service

Beef cattle producers are not seeing the record high prices from a year ago, but strong export numbers are providing reasons to hope 2016 will be profitable.

“Per capita consumption is predicted to be higher in 2016, beef production is expected to be up, and, most importantly, exports are projected to be significantly better than in 2015,” said Brian Williams, agricultural economist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service.

Williams said record prices were driven by extremely tight cattle numbers, and cow-calf profits for 2014 and part of 2015 were at record high levels.

“When the July cattle inventory report came out, indicating that replacement heifer numbers were up 7 percent from the previous year, prices began to fall and continued down until mid-December,” he said.

Beef production for 2015 was the lowest since 1993, but the herd is rapidly expanding.

“Growth in the national beef herd and beef production will continue to pull cattle prices lower. Large supplies of competing proteins such as pork and poultry are expected to push prices further down,” he said. “However, price improvements are projected for steers early in the year before leveling out in the $130-to-$140-per-hundred-weight range.”

Williams said the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s cattle inventory report, released Jan. 29, indicated total cattle numbers are up 3 percent from a year ago.

“What is perhaps more telling is that heifers that are expected to calve this year are up 6 percent, which tells me that producers have been aggressively trying to grow their herds,” he said. “That includes Mississippi’s beef producers with herd numbers up 6 percent, or 30,000 head, from last year. We also saw a 14 percent increase in the number of heifers retained over last year.”

Brandi Karisch, an Extension beef cattle specialist, said cattle producers are missing the strong prices from a year ago.

“Many producers are retaining heifers and hoping prices will improve soon,” she said. “Fortunately, we have plenty of hay, and it’s been a relatively mild winter. Calving season is upon us, so we need to keep a close eye on herds and manage muddy conditions in the rainy months ahead.”

Karisch said mud is always a winter challenge for Mississippi cattle producers.

“Rainy weather hits hard while grasses are dormant and cattle are congregating around feed and water troughs,” she said. “Mud compounds the discomfort from cold temperatures and can actually reduce weight gains.”

Karisch said research has shown that 4 to 8 inches of mud can reduce feed consumption by 15 percent. Severe conditions of 12 inches or more can reduce consumption by 30 percent.

“Clearly, controlling mud in a pasture can have economic benefits,” she said. “Even though mud cannot be eliminated during the winter months, producers can reduce the impact by constructing feeding pads and managing traffic in areas prone to holding water.”

Beef – It's What's for Dinner

Sweet Potato Beef Mash-Up

1 pound ground beef (93% lean or leaner)
1/2 cup water, divided
4 teaspoons taco seasoning mix, divided
1 large sweet potato, cut into 1/2 -inch cubes
1 medium yellow onion, chopped
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1/4 cup Greek or regular nonfat yogurt
1/2 to 1 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
Chopped fresh cilantro
Small whole wheat flour tortillas (6 to 7-inch diameter), warmed

Heat large nonstick skillet over medium heat until hot. Add ground beef; cook 8 to 10 minutes, breaking into 1/2-inch crumbles and stirring occasionally. Remove drippings. Stir in 1/4 cup water and 2 teaspoons taco seasoning; cook 3 minutes. Remove crumbles from skillet; keep warm. Combine sweet potatoes, onion, remaining 1/4 cup water and 2 teaspoons taco seasoning in same skillet. Bring water to a boil. Reduce heat; cover and simmer 10 minutes, stirring once. Remove lid and stir in oil; continue cooking, uncovered, 4 to 6 minutes or until potatoes are tender and begin to brown, stirring frequently. Return beef mixture to skillet; continue to cook 2 to 4 minutes or until heated through, stirring occasionally. Meanwhile, combine yogurt and hot sauce, as desired, in small bowl. Evenly divide beef mixture into tortillas. Garnish with cilantro and serve with yogurt mixture, as desired.

Beef and Cream Cheese Bagelwich

12 ounces cooked beef (such as steak, roast, pot roast or deli roast beef), thinly sliced
4 thin-style flavored bagels or regular bagels, split
1/3 cup reduced-fat cream cheese
2 tablespoons capers
8 thin slices tomato
4 thin slices red onion, separated into rings
Capers (optional)

Spread cream cheese evenly on cut sides of each bagel half. Evenly sprinkle capers over cream cheese. Evenly top with tomato slices and onion rings; top with beef. Garnish with additional capers, if desired. Serve immediately or refrigerate until ready to eat.

Corned Beef Hash

12 ounces cooked corned beef or thickly sliced deli corned beef, cut into 1/4 -inch pieces
1 to 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
4 cups cubed unpeeled potatoes (such as red-skinned, baking or sweet potatoes)
2 medium leeks, thinly sliced
1/2 teaspoon garlic salt
Fried or poached eggs (optional)

Heat 1 tablespoon oil in large nonstick skillet over medium heat until hot. Stir in potatoes, leeks and garlic salt. Cover and cook 12 to 16 minutes or until potatoes and leeks are tender, stirring occasionally. Remove cover and continue to cook 3 to 5 minutes or until potatoes begin to brown, stirring occasionally and adding remaining 1 tablespoon oil to prevent sticking, if needed. Add corned beef to skillet. Continue to cook 2 to 3 minutes or until beef is heated through. Serve hash with fried or poached egg, if desired.

Beef, Wild Rice and Mushroom Bake

1 pound ground beef (90% to 95% lean)
8 ounces assorted fresh wild mushrooms (such as cremini, shiitake) or button mushrooms, sliced
1 package (5.6 to 6.6 ounces) wild rice mix with seasonings
1/4 cup sun-dried tomatoes, not packed in oil
Water
1/2 cup shredded Italian blend cheese

Preheat oven to 375° F. Heat large nonstick skillet over medium heat until hot. Add ground beef and mushrooms; cook 8 to 10 minutes, breaking beef into 3/4-inch crumbles and stirring occasionally. Remove drippings. Stir in rice, contents of seasoning packet and tomatoes. Spoon beef mixture into 2-quart baking dish. Stir in water amount indicated in rice package directions, plus 1/2 cup additional water. Cover with aluminum foil. Bake in preheated oven 45 to 50 minutes or until water is absorbed. Uncover; sprinkle with cheese. Continue baking, uncovered, 5 minutes or until cheese is melted.

Citrus Ginger Teriyaki Steak

1 beef top sirloin steak boneless, cut 1-inch thick
1/2 cup water

Marinade & sauce:

1/2 cup teriyaki marinade and sauce
1/3 cup orange marmalade
2 tablespoons creamy peanut butter
1 tablespoon finely chopped ginger
3 large cloves, crushed
2 teaspoons dark sesame oil

Combine marinade ingredients in small saucepan over medium heat, whisking just until blended. Remove from heat. Place steak and 1/3 cup marinade mixture in plastic bag; turn steak to coat. Close bag securely and marinate in refrigerator 30 minutes, turning once. Reserve remaining marinade mixture for sauce. Remove steak from marinade; discard marinade. Place steak on rack in broiler pan so surface of beef is 3 to 4 inches from heat. Broil steak 16 to 21 minutes for medium rare (145° F) to medium (160° F) doneness, turning once. Meanwhile add water to reserved sauce in small saucepan; bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer 12 to 15 minutes or until slightly thickened, stirring occasionally. Carve steak into slices. Serve steak with sauce.

DOGS

Only HERDING & HUNTING dog breeds will be published. All dogs must be purebred. Mix breed dogs will not be allowed to advertise. Each subscriber is allowed to advertise only two dog breeds. We cannot accept ads from any individual who is engaged in any type of puppy mill operation or acts as a dealer, broker, buncher, or agent in the business of buying and selling dogs and/or bred solely for profit rather than protection of breed integrity (as defined by the United States Department of Agriculture).

We do not list ads for any type of dogs at stud service. Only in-state residents are allowed to advertise within this category.

The Herding & Hunting dog breeds list utilized by the Mississippi Market Bulletin is endorsed by the Mississippi State Veterinarian and the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce.

It is the sole discretion of the Mississippi Market Bulletin to accept or reject any dog ad for submission.

This timber report contains aggregated individual timber sale stumpage data. Many variables, such as raw material demand, mill inventories, buyer competition, quality, topography and weather, play key roles in determining local prices. Pine Sawtimber prices are based upon a 14-inch Diameter-at-Breast-Height (DBH) log size. Pine Chip N Saw prices are based upon a 10-inch DBH log size. The stumpage prices shown here are reprinted with permission from the Timber Owner Market Guide; a bi-monthly publication of Forest2Market (www.forest2market.com).

26th Annual Greenhouse Tomato short course

Now in its 26th year, this is the longest running greenhouse tomato training in the U.S.

Designed for commercial growers, this short course is the place to come to learn all you need to know about growing greenhouse tomatoes and other vegetables. Each year, growers come from over 20 states and several countries.

Dates: March 1 & 2, 2016

Location: Eagle Ridge Conference Center in Raymond, Mississippi (20 miles west of Jackson and Jackson-Evers International Airport)

- Two Days of Seminars with Expert Speakers
- National Exhibitors
- The Latest Greenhouse Extension Bulletins
- Plenty of Opportunity for Questions
- Two Lunches and Greenhouse Tour Included
- Reasonably Priced for Small & Medium Sized Growers
- Featured Topics:

– Tomato Production	– Diagnostics & Disorders
– Environmental Control	– Nutrition & Fertility
– Pest Management Workshop	– Research & Technology Updates
– Marketing & Economics	– Greenhouse Design & Logistics
– Alternative Crops	– Social Media and Marketing

For complete information including agenda, registration, hotels, map and directions, and exhibitor information, go to www.greenhousetomatosc.com or call 601-892-3731.

The Happiness of Cows

By Lise Foy
Contributing Writer

There's a little sign on the market now that says, "Money can't buy happiness, but it can buy cows, which is pretty much the same thing." There are two people in my life that this applies to categorically. My Daddy and my oldest brother love their cows; they truly do bring them happiness in this life. We joked growing up that Daddy had to go be with his girlfriends. My sister-in-law echoes this about my brother these days.

I feel that happiness a bit too when I am visiting and ride out to see the new calves, or feed the bulls, or just go watch them graze and do the head count. Watching a herd of cows can be almost meditative.

The following narrative is written on the interpretive sign located where the beef exhibit was located prior to the fire at the Ag Museum. While there is not a beef animal in the pasture at the moment, the story is nonetheless interesting and important to the story of Mississippi agriculture. As a collaborative author of the text, I share the facts and stories with you now in anticipation of the return of a 'beef' to the Museum pastures.

The Mississippi cattle industry began in the early 1500s, with the European discovery of the Mississippi gulf coast. Spanish explorer Ponce de Leon discovered Florida in 1513, bringing a small herd of Andalusia cattle to what is now the United States. This is the first record of domestic cattle on our shores.

The cattle that pioneered the Mississippi cattle industry were known as Pineywoods cattle, named for the region of the state where they survived. They were a hardy, range hardened breed, highly capable of fending for themselves in adverse conditions. It was the Spaniards who introduced the ancient custom of branding.

French explorer D'Iberville, who discovered Biloxi and Mobile Bay, also brought cattle to Mississippi. These cattle were derived from crosses of all-purpose cattle from northern Iberia with the wild descendants of today's fighting bull. The result was a hardy hybrid stock valued for its tough hide and "stringy" beef. These cattle were described as having long, stern faces, low swinging heads, formidable horns, narrow sides and long legs. Their characteristics much resembled the Texas longhorn.

People living in the Biloxi Bay area during the 1940's told of a bull named 'Joe Lewis'. If sighted, people would yell "Get into the house or hide under the porch!" Joe roamed the area and was not very friendly. In 1957, a statewide stock law was passed requiring livestock owners to keep their herds behind a fence on their own property.

Today, beef cattle production is a significant component of Mississippi agriculture. Mississippi's cattle industry is strong and diverse, with almost a million head of beef cattle, grown in all 82 counties. Operations range from small acreage farms to stocker and cow/calf herds numbering in the thousands. While caring for their herd, checking animals every day to keep them healthy, cattlemen also provide habitat for our abundant wildlife and are caring stewards of the land and water.

Pastured on land not suitable for crop production, cattle convert grass and by-products from other industries into the world's best and tastiest protein. They have four stomachs where microbes aid in the digestion of the roughage they graze.

By-products from cattle are used in making many of the products we use every day. Some of these products include soap, Jell-O, crayons, baseballs and gloves, marshmallows, gummy bears, paint, lipstick, shoes, clothing, furniture and a host of other items.

Today cattle production in Mississippi is a $448 million industry. In 2015, 910,000 head were produced on 15,940 farms. It ranks fourth in agricultural commodities produced

Careless Chemical Application Often Injures Nearby Plants

By Bonnie Coblentz
MSU Extension Service

Chemicals are effective tools for managing weeds and unwanted brush in a landscape, but overlooking their potency or staying power frequently causes unwanted plant casualties.

John Byrd, weed specialist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, said plants growing near an application site can absorb from the soil chemicals used on another plant.

"Most incidents involve herbicide applied to turfgrass in lawns or in ornamental beds under shallow-rooted trees, such as redbud, azalea and some oaks," Byrd said.

Herbicides, like all other pesticides, are carefully labeled with specific information on how to use the chemical. This information includes application instructions, the concentration that should be used, where the product can be safely applied, and the plants the herbicide will control.

"Labels of many herbicides that have known activity on woody vegetation state not to apply within one or two times the dripline of desirable woody vegetation. This estimated safety distance is dependent on both the herbicide and plant species," Byrd said.

"We can see the distance tree limbs extend above ground, so that is generally used as a visible guideline to help determine where roots may be located below ground," he said.

Rainfall is a variable to be considered when applying herbicides near sensitive vegetation.

"Rain within a few days after a cut stump or basal bark application will move herbicide residue more quickly into the soil for uptake by surrounding desirable plants," Byrd said. "Sunlight plays a key role in the degradation of some herbicides. The longer residual herbicide lays on the soil surface exposed to sunlight, the more quickly it decomposes into nonactive compounds."

Wounds caused by string trimmers or lawn mowers are entry points for herbicide uptake into tree trunks.

"Bark on a tree is the first line of defense to keep what's outside, outside, and what's inside, inside," Byrd said. "If the bark is broken and not had a chance to heal over, any herbicide accidentally sprayed on that open wound goes directly into the plant."

"Whether or not it causes injury to the wounded tree depends on the sensitivity of the plant, environmental stress and what tissues it moves into inside the plant," he said.

Stephen Enloe, an associate professor at the University of Florida

Plants growing near an herbicide application site can absorb chemicals from the soil that were intended for another plant. (Photo by MSU Extension Service/Kat Lawrence)

Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences, recently trained MSU Extension personnel on this problem of off-target root uptake, which he called "flashback."

He said some of the damage that appears to be caused by herbicides actually can be traced to issues such as soil compaction, bound roots, or heat, water, nutrient or light stress. Insects and disease can also cause a plant to exhibit symptoms similar to herbicide application.

"These stressors can increase herbicide sensitivity issues," Enloe said. "You already have a tree in a stressful environment, and it does not take a lot of herbicide to throw it over the top."

He urged anyone trying to manage a situation with an injured plant to rule out these stressors before assuming it is herbicide damage.

Some damage may occur when property owners attempt to control large woody plants using the "hack and squirt method." In other words, they hack around unwanted plants and squirt an herbicide spray into the cut. Many times, this method allows herbicides to be released from the target into surrounding soil.

Herbicides are often sprayed beneath tree canopies to keep the weeds down, and these chemicals can affect nearby desirable plants.

"Commonly, damage is caused by using the wrong herbicide for the job," Enloe said.

A classic example is the attempt to control poison ivy growing up desirable trees. An herbicide is used to kill the ivy, but it damages the tree or nearby vegetation. Other times, root sprouts coming up alongside a desirable plant are treated with a systemic herbicide, which absorb into the system of the plant.

"You can easily control those spouts, but you can get translocation from those into the main stems, and injury will be expressed in the upper canopy," he said. "If you are managing for root sprouts, do not use a systemic herbicide."

Weed-and-feed lawn products can cause problems when they are spread in areas where the label says not to apply them, such as under the branch spread of trees, shrubs, bedding plants or garden plants. Extended control products also can create problems.

Injury to nearby desirable plants may not always be avoided when using chemical weed control, but precautions can make it less likely. Always label herbicides properly and never leave them in unmarked containers. Be very careful when using chemicals to selectively remove trees very close to other trees, especially others of the same species. Always follow label instructions when using chemical herbicides.

Greenhouse Tomato Growing Taught at March Workshop

By Susan Collins-Smith
MSU Extension Service

Individuals interested in greenhouse tomato production can learn how to successfully grow and market the crop during the Greenhouse Tomato Short Course March 1 and 2 in Raymond.

Experienced growers and experts with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, Mississippi Agricultural and Forestry Experiment Station, the University of Tennessee Extension Service and Auburn University will present seminars on all aspects of production during the 26th annual workshop.

The course will be held at Eagle Ridge Conference Center at 1500 Raymond Lake Road in Raymond.

Topics include lessons growers will learn in their first year, understanding greenhouse design and engineering, properly controlling the greenhouse environment, using social media to benefit the business, best cultural practices for greenhouse vegetables, plant nutrition for tomatoes and lettuce, an overview of the latest varieties, a cost analysis of production, market development, and alternative crops.

An in-depth pest management workshop will include information on diagnosing plant problems, insect and plant disease identification and control, and physiological disorders.

Participants will tour a successful greenhouse operation that produces tomatoes, cucumbers and lettuce.

The workshop is the longest running course of its kind in the United States and attracts participants from more than 20 states, Latin America, the Caribbean and sometimes Canada and Mexico.

Exhibitors from the U.S. and Canada will display and demonstrate their products.

Advance registration costs $175 per person and must be received by February 20. Participants can register online at <http://greenhouse-tomatosc.com/> or mail in the printable form found on the registration page. Registration at the door costs $200 per person.

Registration includes refreshments, lunch on both days, all Extension publications and a Greenhouse Tomato Short Course baseball cap.

For more information about the short course, visit the Greenhouse Tomato Short Course website at <http://greenhousetomatosc.com> or contact Rick Snyder at 601-892-3731 or Rick.Snyder@msstate.edu.
